

today we remember the day many lost their lives,
either in gas chambers,
from starvation, or even by knives.

these cruel events all took place because of religion, sexuality, or their race.

no one should be judged for who they want to be but especially not trapped in cages when they have the whole world to see.

imagine how they felt,
sitting alone at night, wondering how it would be,
if only they could see the light.

imagine the hope they had,
that one day they would be free, having dreams about chimneys, and what they could be having for tea.

however thousands didn't make it, despite their hopes and dreams, so now we all stand together, as an even bigger team.

we hold our respect and love for them deep in our hearts, because we are stronger together than when we're apart.
